Fortunately for us, my son's third grade teacher will be teaching cursive handwriting this year. This workbook is a great practice book. It begins with practice for each alphabet letter. The pages are regular letter sized so plenty of space to practice on. Each alphabet letter (upper and lower case) has arrows and numbered steps 1,2,3 so that the student can trace on his/her own. The large amount of space is my son's favorite aspect of the workbook. Next, there are 25 pages of tracing words, and then 25 pages of silly sentences (like " Juggling jaguars jam to jazz"). Although it is didactic in nature, it is also a fun way to learn. My son likes it; in fact, he asked me to write this review so that other kids will know about it. I also recommend this book.

I'm sorry to say that our public school where we live do not teach cursive. I have a 7th grade granddaughter who wanted to learn cursive, so I got her this book. She has been sitting for hours since it arrived and can't tear herself away. I got this one above other items because it gave the numbered directional signals where the other ones did not. This is the system that I was taught 60 years ago. Some things just never go out of style. One of the reasons I wanted her to be able to write cursive is because I want her to be able to read it. I have purchased several different "ology" books , like dragonology, piratology, etc. These books are fun for her, but so many of the items presented are in cursive and she struggles so to read them and eventually has to ask grandma for help. I want her to be able to enjoy these on her own. I really think it's a shame that so many school systems are not teaching cursive anymore because of the new tech age. Many things will be inaccessible to this new generation on account of it.

Love this book! I bough it for my son because I know that cursive writing it's no longer being taught in school and since I am now homeschooling my son I taught it would be a great addition to his curriculum. In the begging it has just the letters on its own then comes the sentences along with silly pictures that describe the sentences.

Perfect way to introduce your kids to cursive writing. I homeschool my 10 year old daughter and my autistic 12 years old son. Even though it is slightly still a challenge for him he can still do it because the book allows you to first trace the letter several times then write it on your own. Note, he was able to get the hang of it. For my daughter I let her write words that start with the letter she is working on ...just to challenge her a bit more. I highly recommend this book to any parent that wants their kids to learn/practice cursive writing. I insist that my kids learn cursive and learn how to write their own names in cursive.

Excellent book to teach cursive. I would definitely recommend to any parent or caregiver. There are pages for letter, words, and sentences with lines. It would help with improving handwriting overall.

My daughter needs to learn cursive writing before school starts in the fall. She's going to a new school and her former school didn't teach cursive writing. So far, it's really helping her. We're up to working on the words now. I like the numbers and arrows guiding her on how to form each letter. And there is plenty of room for her to practice. The only problem she had was boredom with just writing the letters. She's excited to be working on words now and can't wait to finish those and move on to the silly sentences that are in the back of the book.

My son is very interested in this book. It has helped him learn how to write each letter...My only complaint, is all the extra loops in between the letters...I think it makes it difficult for the kids to learn with an extra loop in between the "B" So I just go over the examples and get rid of the "loop" to make it easier for him to learn how to write it.

Great book. Just as advertised. I bought it for my daughter who is going into 4th grade because they no longer teach cursive in school where we live. She used it the first day and was very excited to learn.
