This deck of puzzle cards contains a total of 54 cards, that contain the 'pieces' for 18 full color puzzles (3 cards per puzzle) on one side and 18 blue-tone puzzles on the reverse side. The full-color side contains, when the pictures are completed, pictures of animals in numbers from 1-18, and each completed puzzle contains a phrase identifying the amount, color, and type of animal; ie. three white sheep. For my four-year old, who we primarily purchased these for, I think that these simple, but obvious, phrases will aid in encouraging simple reading skills. She has two sets of these puzzle cards made by the School Zone company and seems to enjoy both of them a lot, both for playing alone during quiet time and as a learning activity with mom. The reverse side, with the blue-tones, which would be the 'advanced' level of the puzzle game, I suppose, is dedicated to shapes, numbers and emotions; ie. 'one sad rectangle' or 'eight surprised triangles.' The reverse side, because of the the single colors, is of course more difficult to match because the cards look more alike than the full color side. For the price, you just can't beat these little cards games. We bought four of them recently, and each one is a fun learning activity in its own unique way. Something I especially like about them is that this company manufactures their card games in the USA.

I purchased these cards for my daughter a few years back. She was in Pre-K at the time. My wife used these cards to help my daughter recognize numbers, shapes and animal. My daughter enjoyed putting the puzzles together. Now she's in the first grade, reading, counting and writing well. She still enjoys putting puzzles together. This cards along with a few other flash cards I purchased gave her a great start. Since kids are visual learners these cards are a great start.

I got this for my 3 year old who loves puzzles. While he didn't hate it, it wasn't the hit I was hoping it would be. Maybe he'll like it more when he gets older.

Satisfied customer. The colors on the cards are very light, however. Sort of faded. Service was very prompt. Happy overall.

Eazy and useful more than usual cards. My girl love it so much.
